Osiatis, an IT service provider specialised in engineering and management services, continues to expand in the Rhône-Alpes region with new premises in Eybens in the heart of the built-up area of Grenoble.

Despite a weak market and the withdrawal of several IT service providers in 2004 and 2005, Osiatis has decided to remain in this region with its many schools and universities close to a host of dynamic players in the industrial and service sectors.

Osiatis' regional agency currently employs 180 people and houses the regional and national service centres on premises with a surface area of 1,000 square meters.

A wide range of competences and a seasoned workforce allow Osiatis to deliver its entire service range in the region, including engineering and management of infrastructures and applications and maintenance of critical systems.

"Its commercial drive, its capacity to recruit talents and the potential of the region will enable the Eybens centre to continue growing in the short and medium term," states Philippe Debard, Manager Southeast France, Osiatis.

Osiatis has already forged close partnerships with major regional players, such as Schneider Electric, Caterpillar, CHU Grenoble, Vetrotex, Go Sport, STGM, Léon Grosse Le Dauphiné Libéré.
